The following ode was read at the dedication of the monument:

O Fort Wadsworth, sentinel of the bay,
Thy walls have witnessed many a fray;
But never a day more glorious than this,
When we unveil thy monument of bliss.

For here, a century ago,
A signal flashed, a beacon's glow;
And Thayer's hand, with steady might,
Unfurled the flag that won the fight.

The British fleet, in proud array,
Rode at anchor in the bay;
But when they saw that signal gleam,
They knew their hour of doom had come.

For Perry's ships, with sails unfurled,
Swept down upon them like a whirlwind;
And in the fierce and bloody fray,
The British fleet was swept away.

Thus ended the War of 1812,
And peace returned to this fair land;
And Fort Wadsworth, ever since that day,
Has stood as a symbol of our nation's sway.

So let us raise our voices high,
In praise of Thayer and his victory;
And let this monument forever stand,
A tribute to his valor and his land.
