Carla is a young, black woman who is struggling to come to terms with the recent death of her mother. She is lost and alone, and she is searching for something to fill the void in her life.

Lillie is an older, white woman who is also grieving the loss of a loved one. She is a retired schoolteacher who has spent her life dedicated to helping others. She is kind and compassionate, and she sees something in Carla that reminds her of herself.

Carla and Lillie meet at a support group for grieving people. They are drawn to each other, and they begin to spend time together outside of the group. They talk about their lives, their losses, and their hopes for the future. Through their conversations, they learn from each other and they grow closer.

As their bond deepens, Carla and Lillie begin to challenge the stereotypes that they have held about each other. Carla learns that Lillie is not just a "nice old white lady," but a complex and intelligent woman with a rich history. Lillie learns that Carla is not just a "young black woman," but a strong and resilient woman with a bright future ahead of her.

Harlem Duet is a powerful and moving play that explores the complexities of human relationships. It is a story about love, loss, and the intersections of race and gender. It is a story that will stay with you long after you have seen it.

Themes

- Love: Harlem Duet is a love story, but it is not a traditional love story. It is a story about the love between two women who are very different from each other. It is a story about the love that can grow between people who have experienced loss.
- Loss: Harlem Duet is also a story about loss. Carla has lost her mother, and Lillie has lost her husband. They are both grieving, and they are both trying to find a way to move on with their lives.
- Race: Harlem Duet is a play about race. Carla is a black woman, and Lillie is a white woman. They come from different backgrounds, and they have different experiences. The play explores the ways in which race affects their lives.
- Gender: Harlem Duet is also a play about gender. Carla is a young woman, and Lillie is an older woman. They are at different stages in their lives, and they have different expectations. The play explores the ways in which gender affects their lives.
