The Wolf Brethren were first formed in the 6th century AD, during the reign of King Aelle of Sussex. They were originally a small group of warriors, but their numbers grew over time as they became more and more successful in battle. By the 8th century AD, the Wolf Brethren were one of the most feared fighting forces in Europe.

The Wolf Brethren were recruited from the best and brightest young men in the Anglo-Saxon kingdom. They were trained in all aspects of warfare, including swordsmanship, archery, and hand-to-hand combat. They were also taught to be loyal and obedient to their lord, and to never retreat from battle.

The Wolf Brethren fought in many of the major battles of the Anglo-Saxon period, including the Battle of Hastings in 1066. They were always at the forefront of the fighting, and they played a key role in many Anglo-Saxon victories.

The Wolf Brethren were not just fierce warriors, they were also loyal companions to their lord. They were always willing to put their lives on the line to protect him, and they never hesitated to carry out his orders.
